Changes from the Patriarchate:

METROPOLITAN NICHOLAS

We may often feel that things never change — especially in the Church. As Orthodox Christians we take a certain measure of pride in the idea that we are the original church, and that we continue to follow the teachings that our Lord gave to the Apostles and handed down to us.

But in truth, regardless of what we think, some things do change in the Church. Recently the Ecumenical Patriarchate made a decision to allow the second marriage of clergy under certain circumstances. This decision was made with specific reference to clergy who have lost their wives either to death or desertion of the household.

While we are used to a different general practice in our Church, this decision has great merit in a time when the world around us is rapidly changing, often in unusual ways. Hundreds of years ago, it was less common for a clergy family to move away from their immediate family. One of the benefits of this was that there were always people from the family able to help each other - because no one lived more than a few houses away, or perhaps just in the next village.

But today, families are smaller, distances are greater, and the clergy assignments are in a wider geographic framework. In those cases where a young clergyman did not have the intent to live a single life but it was his prayer to raise a family in the faith, without his wife at home he might not be able to fulfill his basic parish obligations.

In addition to that situation, in our world today we find that it is not unusual for people to be drawn away from the pureness of life in the Church for the “good time” of life outside of God. When a spouse would determine to leave the household for the purported joy of the world, the clergyman is left alone and abandoned. Likewise, there are also cases where a marriage is entered into because it serves a different purpose — financial, immigration, confusion, etc. In these cases, a person agrees to marry the clergyman because it seems like the best answer for now...but the marriage has no long-term expectation. This self-serving use of marriage is also a problem.

By means of this decision, the Patriarchate has opened the doors to a brighter future for those clergymen who fall within these guidelines. While it was always the intent that the clergyman should have a strong marriage, it was never the intent that a married clergyman (especially with children) should be left alone in the world without the support of his wife.

While it is true that not all cases will fall under these guidelines, this decision of our Ecumenical Patriarchate will bring hope and joy to some of our clergymen who are living in difficult times right now.

If you know of a priest who is currently in this position — please don't make this a topic of local gossip and speculation. Just pray that God will grant him strength and guide him to the right path.

Expressions of Sympathy

Jane Speros and family on the passing +Gregory Speros on Thursday, February 28, 2019.

Family of +Bob Cade who passed on Wednesday, March 6, 2019.

Thank you

To our Annunciation parish family. My late husband, Gregory, and I would like to thank you for your prayers on behalf of our daughter, Cynthia Speros Yonts, in her battle with breast cancer. Her oncologist in Annapolis, Maryland, has declared her CANCER FREE. We are grateful for your prayers and we thank God for his help with Cynthia. God bless each and every one of you. —Jane Speros

Thank you to Deno & Phyllis Davell, Morrey & Tina Prayzer, Ernie & Connie Stathes and all the organizations and parishioners and friends of this parish who helped me have a most memorable and very Happy 90th Birthday Celebration. Every card, every gift, every wish and expression of goodwill for me to have a Happy Birthday was very much appreciated. Thank you again. May God bless each of you. — Don Hanel

On behalf of John, Michael and Steven Polites and their families—we'd like to thank everyone who sent us over 100 cards and letters congratulating us for our 50th Anniversary on February 2 in Sarasota, FL. We were touched by your thoughtfulness. Many people from Dayton flew here to be with us as we celebrated this special day. We'll always remember and cherish the 70 plus years we spent at our beautiful "hometown" Annunciation Greek Orthodox Church where Margie and I both were Christened in the 1940's and married in 1969. We both attended Sunday and Greek school together in the late 40's and early 50's. Annunciation Dayton will live in our hearts forever.

My family and I wish to thank the Annunciation family and Father Joseph for your continuing prayers and support. The road ahead may still be long but with God's blessings and your love, we will get there. —George Demetriades

Our New Bookkeeper

Please welcome our new Bookkeeper, Brenda Day. For 28 years, she was the comptroller for a manufacturing firm in Xenia. Brenda is married, has a daughter, and loves the Great Smokey Mountains. She will be in the office Tuesdays through Thursdays.

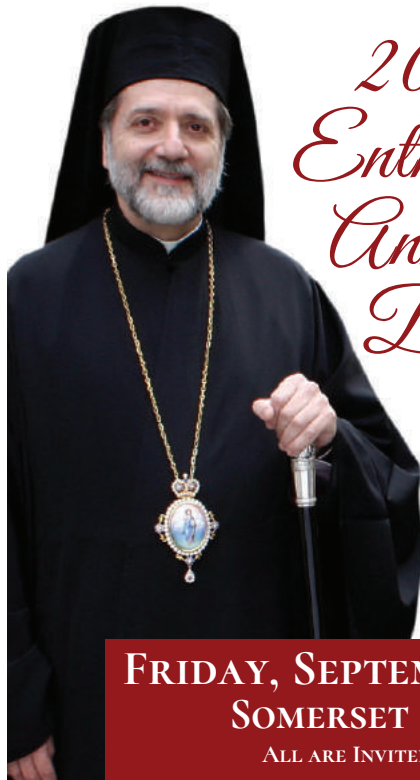

We wish Brandee the best as she spends more time with her family.

Brad Stine, Comedian

Brad Stine is one of America's most popular Christian comedians and has made his faith and conservatism the focus of his act. He tours the country performing regularly at churches, fundraising events, and entertainment venues. Brad's work has also been featured on NBC Nightly News, HBO, Showtime, MTV, and Comedy Central. Stine has been described as "a clean Denis Leary" and his act targets "liberals, humanists, political correctness and judgmental Christians." Brad has five DVDs as well as two books which feature his humorous material. His keynote address at our partnership banquet this year is sure to make you laugh!

April Community Care Ministry – Elizabeth New Life Center

The Elizabeth New Life Center (ENLC) began in 1989 as a volunteer ministry to meet the needs of women contemplating abortion. ENLC has grown to include a network of services, including free pregnancy tests and ultrasounds at locations in Dayton, Kettering, Lebanon, Sharonville, and Sidney. It also offers educational classes and mentoring, material assistance, youth development and marriage enrichment programs. Please help support this important ministry.
